Choir Concert Planned

"The Articles of Faith," a major choral work by Dr. Merrill Bradshaw, coordinator of applied music for the BYU Music Dept., will be a featured number on the BYU A Cappella Choir Concert program Thursday evening.

THE CONCERT, in the Gerrit de Jong Jr. Concert Hall of the Harris Fine Arts Center, will begin at 8:15 p.m. under the direction of Dr. Ralph Woodward, professor of music and director of choral activities at BYU.

Tickets are still available from the Fine Arts Ticket Office for the reserved seat performance.

RECORDINGS with large commercial companies and numerous radio and television appearances have brought the choir before thousands of listeners, said Bradshaw.

The 64-voice choir returned Saturday from a week-long tour through the Midwest. They were acclaimed wherever they performed, according to Dr. Woodward.

THE WICHITA, Kansas "Eagle Review" music critic, C. Henry Nathan, wrote, "The Mormon choir sang lavishly, lovingly, and lustily. Dr. Woodward is an effective, engrossing conductor, effectively calling his entire body into play."

"Through his personal compelli-ing rhythm, he produces brilliant tempo and choral tones. Whithams are used to hearing the finest in choral programming. Maestro Woodward's group proves that Provo, Utah, also has a top organization," said Mr. Nathan.

JAMES NEILSON, director of the Educational Dept. at the G. Leblanc Corp. in Kenosha, Wis., stated in a personal letter to Dr. Woodward, "You're a great choir, one of the best anywhere."

"The performance Sunday night in Kansas City, featured impeccable diction, a wonderfully warm, tonal blend and balance, an intelligent awareness of the demands made by Pythagorean tuning, and a refined, yet soaring response from the soprano section one finds only in the very great choirs."

What Determines College Success?

Harvard University has been conducting an experiment for the past nine years that has had some interesting results.

Since 1957, the college had admitted more than 200 youths who never would have qualified for admission to Harvard had they been judged on their college board test grades alone.

According to deans at Harvard, the college "took a gamble" on these students, who were chosen partly for the courageous way they struggled through a poverty-stricken childhood.

These students were even awarded scholarships to help them defray the high costs of an education at the university.

Most of them were raised in the slums, many attended unaccredited high schools, the majority of them were Negroes, a few were the children of maids or migrant workers.

The dean of admissions at Harvard said the academic records established by these students have been amazing.

Eighty-five percent of them have already graduated, a number of them with honors, and one with a Rhodes scholarship.

It seems that these students kept up academically with all other Harvard students, some of whom came from the country's best preparatory schools and the most academically strong public high schools.

Harvard deans started the program after questioning the validity of college board scores in determining the success of a prospective student from poverty-stricken homes and substandard high schools who would have in college.

As a result, they established what has come to be known as "The Gamble Fund" to finance the education of these students at Harvard.

For a university that holds such prestige and which can almost pick and choose its students from the large number that apply, it is good to see it has a real desire to educate those who deserve it.

Unfortunately, many other deserving students never reach the ivy-covered halls of higher education because poverty forbids it.

Perhaps our own University could undertake a program which will see scholarships or financial help offered to those high school graduates who show promise but don't have the means to attend college. High grades are not the only criteria for judging a person's potential.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT

No Change In Elections

by Darryl Harris
ASBYU Press Secretary

You won't see any proposed changes in student government for our consideration on a ballot during studentbody elections. Plans have been altered.

ASBYU executive officers will instead continue to study the problem and ready a written proposal for presentation to their successors after elections. Since present officers have been directly involved for more than a year, and in some cases two years, they know what several problems and weaknesses in the present system are and how they might be remedied.

After elections, joint orientation meetings will be held attended by old and new officers. There the proposed changes in the structure of student government will be presented.

The group will then jointly agree on what would be done, whether it be to throw the whole idea out, or to accept a new proposal.

If they agree on a new system, it would then be taken to the Assembly for ratification. Assemblymen will have taken part in the proposal, so chances of passing such an amendment would be high.

The proposal or amendment to the constitution would then go before the studentbody for a vote, which would require a special election. The new system would go into effect only after student approval.

Some ask why not make the changes now. "Because we do not want to hastily present a plan of action to the studentbody," explains ASBYU President Bob Christiansen. "But I do think a change is necessary."

To make a change now, the amendment would have to appear in the Daily Universe and be posted on bulletin boards ten school days prior to the election date, according to the present constitution. And it would have to be approved by vote of two-thirds of the Assembly or by petitions presented to the Assembly signed by ten per cent of the student association.

Sufficient time is not left to both draw up a proposal, one that would be satisfactory to the majority of students, and put it on a ballot before final elections.

Bob Christiansen held a meeting Saturday with class and studentbody office candidates. He explained to them the situation and time factor involved. The majority of the candidates agreed that student government changes are necessary, and several of them were willing to step right into a new system.

"Even if it meant the elimination of the office I'm running for," one candidate said, "I would favor a change if it meant better representation for the students."

The biggest roadblock encountered is fear associated with change. Most people do not like any kind of change because there are no past experiences to weigh.

Pasadena To Show Larson's Play

by Cathy Steck
Univ. Staff Writer

Dr. Clinton F. Larson's musical play, "Snow White and the Mirror," will open in the Pasadena Playhouse on April 15, according to Dr. Lowell Lees, president.

THE PLAY, which is the story of Snow White, who has been married to the prince for 15 years, is extraordinary as a dramatic vehicle because not only is it a musical play in the conventional sense, but also a poetry drama.

It tells how Snow White's five children run afoul of the witch, who takes away their names. The mirror becomes a character in the play and with the assistance of Lavender, Snow White's little sister, helps the children recover their names.

IN 1964, the play was submitted in the drama competition of the Utah Institute of Fine Arts and was awarded first prize in the children's theater.

Directing the BYU faculty member's drama at the Playhouse will be Buddy Younggreen, who has outstanding success in children's theater. Former pianist and arranger for the Valley Music Hall in Salt Lake City, Royce Twitchell, has written the musical score.

DR. LEES said that the cast would consist of such well-known performers as Susan Stone, Kent Cozard, Meredith Smith, Peggy Exum, Marsha Fickas, Gary Schink and Don Miller.

Dr. Larson is the author of 18 other plays. He is particularly known for his "The Marble of the Prophet." This play tells how Brigham Young accepted the challenge of keeping the children of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in harmony with the visions of Joseph Smith. This play will be released on KBYU-TV at General Conference in April, according to Larry Bastion of KBYU-TV.

IN A RECENT work, "The Prophet," he has told the story of Joseph Smith from April of 1844 until his martyrdom in June. Other works of his dramatic works are "Saul of Tarsus," "The Hole in the Rock," "They Do Not Return," "Versailles," "The Brother of Jared" and "The Prisoner, Stories of our Time," and Mary of Nazareth.

Dr. Larson, who is currently a professor of English and chairman of the creative writing program at BYU, is also known for his poetry and literature. Some of his works include "Literature of the West," "The Conversions of God," "The Clarion Silence," "The Tower of the Winds" and the translation of Jean de la Cespède's "Benignance and Baroque Lyrics."

HIS "ILLUSTRATED" Stories from the "Book of Mormon," Produced Land Publications, will be published in June.

The production of the musical fantasy, "Snow White and the Mirror," in the Pasadena Playhouse is a great honor for Dr. Larson, as it is famous for its contribution to the world of the theater. Under Dr. Lees and its former president, it has produced many stars, and the quality of its performances has been a standard in the field of drama.

Herees Still Intramural Hoop Champs

by Bob Montgomery
Universe Sportswriter

The Intramural basketball championships reached an exciting climax last week as the Herees retained their title, downing the Strangers 70-46.

LED BY sharp-shooting Joel Gardner, the Herees snared the Intramural title by outscoring the Strangers in a stiff, hard-fought contest.

The Herees jumped off to an early lead midway through the first quarter and kept popping in points until the buzzer sounded, ending the first half.

THE DETERMINED Strangers came back in the third quarter sparked by the pin-point shooting of Kirby McMasters and the strong rebounding of John Hansen.

They shaved the lead down to ten points in the third quarter and then closed the gap to two points in the final stanza. But the hustling Herees were determined to capture their second straight title as they maintained their lead until the final buzzer sounded.

JOEL GARDNER, of the Herees, was high point man, pouring in 19 points for the game. Close behind Gardner was Kirby McMasters of the Strangers, who potted 17.

The game climaxed the intramural basketball season in which 243 teams played in over 675 games.

Finally! Dodger Aces End Holdout and Sign For $210,000 (At Least)

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale, the best combination in baseball, joined with the Los Angeles Dodgers Wednesday after holding out for $1 million.

ANNOUNCING the signings, General Manager R. J. Bussard said the pair got more than $210,000. He didn't say how much more. But only Tuesday the pitchers had rejected Bussard's "final" offer of $210,000—$10 for Koufax and $97,500 for Drysdale.

Bussard upped the ante and got the signatures of the two whose 49 victories were more than half the 97 games won by Los Angeles last year in capturing the National League pennant.

IT'S PUT IT this way. "Koufax would a news conference. "Don and I are both happy." Koufax's original demand—$1 million over three years, to be divided equally between them, ended the baseball tradition of a player for himself in negotiations, Koufax and Drysdale bargained as an entry, and hired a lawyer to do their talking.

KOUFAX, WHO WON 26 and lost only eight last year, and Drysdale, who was 23-12, will join the Dodgers in Phoenix, Ariz., Thursday or Friday.

"We're glad it's over," said Koufax. "It hasn't been fun for anybody."

THE SIGNING of Koufax and Drysdale leaves only two major players unsigned, Pitcher Bob Shaw of the San Francisco Giants and pitcher Ralph Terry of the Cleveland Indians.

The day before signing the pair, Bussard said he telephoned club owner Walter O'Malley in Vero Beach, Fla., and the two agreed that the $210,000 was the highest the club would go.

ATTORNEY BILL HAYES turned off the offer down, saying, "It was simply a matter of economics—not enough money."

What did Hayes indicate the holdouts would settle for?

"THE CONFUSING thing is that Mr. Hayes said that Koufax would not settle for anything less than Willie Mays, San Francisco Giants star outfielder, but neither I nor Mr. Hayes knew what Mays' salary was," said Bussard.

Press reports have indicated Mays is in the $125,000 to $130,000 bracket.

KOUFAX, LEFT-HANDED strike-out king, is regarded by many as the game's all-time greatest pitcher. Right-hander Drysdale is an iron man with a blazing fast ball who has been a key man in the Dodger lineup for years.

Bussard, in an airport interview before he met with Hayes, said his offer Tuesday would be a "back-gate offer"—he wouldn't accept the signature of one without that of the other.

THE KOUFAX-Drysdale holdout—their sympathizers called it a lockout—was one of the more bizarre disputes in baseball annals.

The Dodgers, said Bussard two months ago when the pair announced their joint negotiations for the $1 million, three-year contract, do not give contracts for more than one year, and they positively would not deal with Drysdale and Sandy on equal terms.

GLICKMAN said death threats were made to him and Terrill, 6-foot-6, guitar playing Chicagoan. Terrill, World Boxing Association heavyweight champion said Monday he was never threatened and reiterated that Glickman was never his right manager but only booked Terrill's night club act, called "The Heavyweights."

THE NEW YORK State Athletic Commission denied Terrill a license because of his connection with Glickman, an admitted acquaintance of hoodlums.

The U.S. Attorney spokesman, asked what indictments specifically were sought, asserted:

"WE'RE not even close to that type of thing.

"If the first grand jury session is lousy, there may not even be any more."

However, the spokesman admitted, "We'd like to nail Aldersio and a couple of New York hoodlums."
